heads.

LEESBURG, VA., July 17, 1878. Editors Dispatch: The quiet old county of Loudoun has aroused herself at last from the thraidom of indifference which has bound her for some time past. The wave of political excitement which has been ro!ling over the State has thoroughly infected our people. People for the time have ceased to talk of repudiation, of the Potter committee, &c., and are eagerly looking forward to the coming Convention to be held in Alexandria on the 28th of the next month. It is very difficult to gather the real sentiment of Loadoun at present, though from the reports that daily come in from various parts of the county it seems as if Hunton is leading his competitors and is the choice of the majority, while Lee is pretty strong in some sections. The Neale men are far in the minority. Hunton will evidently be the first choice, with Lee as second, unless a sudden wave of public opinion changes the state of affairs between this and the Convention.

The excessive heat of the last few weeks has proved very beneficial to the farmer. The corn has sprung up wonderfully, and there is a prospect of a splendid crop in the tall, which will do much to enliven the trade of the county. Wheat, oats, and hay have turned out excellently, while the recent rains have started the grass. The country has more of the appearance of a May month than the usual dry period of July. Many persons driven from the cities by the oppressive heat have found cool and pleasant retreats in the farm-houses and villages scattered throughout the county. RISK.

A Sound Sleeper.

On lay. Sabbath evening as the Yellow Sulphur stage was rounding the top of the iong hill, known as the "Haynes Hill," on its regular trip to meet the 6 P. Lewis Glass (colored), the driver, was thrown from the stage with terrible force to the ground, dragging him several yards, crushing and mangling his head and right arm in a fearful manner. The blood spouted from both ears, nostrils, and mouth in a stream as large as the little finger. Glass's life was despaired of for several days, but we are glad to say at the present writing that the driver, stuck to the stage "like grim nected with fisheries. death" until it turned over, and escaped with very slight injury.
